THE EVENTUAL DISCLOSURE OF FAITHFUL LABOR

There is an old story of a diligent blacksmith. His work was a part of his religion. He performed his labor as a devotion to God. For days he carefully welded together the links of a giant chain. Years passed. The godly smith went to heaven and was forgotten upon earth.

One night a ship was tossed upon the sea. A wild storm was raging. The anchor was dropped. The safety of crew, passengers and cargo depended upon the strength of the unseen chain. But through the dark night the ship was held surely.

The next morning the storm ended. The relieved passengers and crew emerged from their cabins. They gathered on deck and sang hymns of thanks to God. They did not know, however, to thank God for the conscientious laborer of long ago – the reliable man who crafted the powerful, life-saving chain.

There are quiet KSBC heroes and heroines of whom you know little or nothing. In the distant past, earnest saints valiantly started your church. Later other now anonymous people kept the doors open. In more recent years enduring Christians saw the church revived and restored to vibrant life. You can name many of them. And, yet, in future even their names and contributions will scarcely be known by coming generations.

And you! In the future countless people of God will benefit from your efforts. They will enjoy the unity, cooperation, love and strength of KSBC. If they know you at all they will only be aware of your names in the church records.

They will not know of the efforts of your diligent Transition Team. They will be unaware that you faithfully followed their lead. They will not realize the urgency of your mighty prayer for revival and renewal. They will never be informed of your humble reconciliation with whom you greatly differed – even disliked or despised. They might never hear of your fresh God-given vision. They will not recount your wise and worthy labor.

But, you dependable disciples of Christ, go on. Labor on. Pray on, no matter what others may do. The “times of refreshing will come from the Presence of the Lord”. People will be forever blessed by your work for God. Your faithful labor will eventually be disclosed.

Dwight Reagan, IIP
